

The Eyes of the Endless

Many years ago when the stars in the sky were closer than they are now people would go to sleep as a method of visiting their friends and family on the other side of the universe.

The way it was done was very very ritualistic and strange.

They had to dance around in a circle very very quickly until they started to get tired and dizzy. Then they would make the circle smaller and tighter as they dance closer together.

The circle was called the Endless Ring and the people were of forever forever and never of never except sometimes.

When they were all dancing in the centre, holding onto each other they would spin apart and whirl around and around each upon their own axis, getting dizzier and dizzier as the blood rushed and then their eyes would float out of their heads and float on upwards and upwards to the stars.

All of the stars are really eyes of Endless People from the Endless Rings going to see each other.

There is a big white shining six pointed star and it is called the Astral Beacon. Everyone in the sky is an eye and they dance around the cosmic axle rod.

The stars are maintained and looked after by the overseer dusting man. He sees to it that the eyes get back to Earth again in time for waking up all. Although, sometimes, he gets confused and brings back different eyes than the ones you had before.

Then you wake up seeing and knowing things of which you were previously unaware.
